Occupational justice: New concept or historical foundation of occupational therapy?

CAOT Archives Committee
Donna Campbell, Juliette Cooper, Debra Froese, Brenda Head, Natalie MacLeod-Schroeder, Nicolas McCarthy, Lisa Sheehan
Session Objectives

In this extended session we will:

- present concepts of occupational justice
- describe the Settlement House Movement
  - societal context
  - development
  - principles
  - the occupational therapy connection
- describe the development of occupational justice in occupational therapy
- discuss with you how this material relates to contemporary occupational therapy practice
Occupational justice is “the right of every individual to be able to meet basic needs and to have equal opportunities and life chances to reach toward her or his potential but specific to the individual’s engagement in diverse and meaningful occupation.”

(Wilcock & Townsend, 2009, p. 193)
Health, occupation and justice

- Occupation is a determinant of health, well-being and justice
- Health and justice work together to enable people to engage in meaningful occupation
- Being client-centered assumes advocacy for people to engage in meaningful occupations that improve their health and well-being
- It is a right to have access to occupations that are meaningful and valued
Health, occupation and justice

Survival

Health/Well-being

Social Nature

Occupational Nature

Social

JUSTICE

Occupational

(adapted from Wilcock & Townsend, 2009, p. 194)
Empowerment

- Foundational to a democratic society.
- Alleviates powerlessness.
- Shared power.
- Power gains in engaging in occupations
- OT needs to be more about empowerment and less about medical model.
- People are empowered by engaging in occupations.

(Townsend, 1996)
Four Occupational Rights

1. Right to experience occupation as meaningful and enriching
2. Right to develop through participation in occupations for health and social inclusion
3. Right to exert individual or population autonomy through choice in occupations
4. Right to benefit from fair privileges for diverse participation in occupations

(Townsend & Wilcock, 2004, p. 80)
Occupational Justice Beliefs

- People can voice what structures are in place to organize occupation
- Each individual’s life circumstance and occupational needs are different; this needs to be acknowledged and honoured
- An occupational therapist can be an agent of change

(Townsend & Polatjko, 2013)
A Framework of Occupational Justice

Structural Factors

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Underlying occupational determinants</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Type of economy</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Regional/national/international policies</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Values underlying policy</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Cultural values</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Occupational instruments or programs</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Examples:</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Health and community supports</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Income supports</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Housing</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Education</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Employment</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Transportation</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Recreational facilities</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Universal design and accessibility</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Technology use</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Communications and media</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Contextual Factors

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Examples:</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Age</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Gender</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sexual orientation</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ability/disability</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Income/wealth</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Employment status</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ethnicity</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Religion</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>National origin</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Urban/rural/homeless</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Social networks and support</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Occupational Outcomes of Justice

- Occupational Rights
  - Meaning
  - Participation
  - Choice
  - Balance

Occupational Outcomes of Injustice

- Examples:
  - Occupational imbalance
  - Marginalization
  - Deprivation
  - Alienation

(adapted from Townsend & Polatajko, 2013, p. 81)
Outcomes of Occupational Justice

- Occupational Rights
  - Meaning
  - Participation
  - Choice
  - Balance

(Townsend and Polatajko, 2013, p. 81)
Outcomes of Occupational Injustice

- Occupational imbalance
- Occupational marginalization
- Occupational deprivation
- Occupational alienation

(Townsend and Polatajko, 2013, p.81)
Canada was only 23 years old in 1890
Total population was ~ 5 million, concentrated in Ontario and Quebec
55% were of British ancestry, 28% of French ancestry
Immigration was high, mostly from eastern Europe – source of cheap labour
Very much a “British Dominion”
External affairs managed by Britain
68% of population rural, 32 % urban
Economy primarily agriculture
Migration beginning from rural to cities
Widespread poverty, unemployment, slums
Industrial revolution - conditions in workplaces (factories) appalling
Factory work was repetitive, had no connection to end product, pay by piecework, long hours
Sense of alienation in society

(Friedland, 2011)
Societal Context 1890 to 1920

- No standards for clean water
- Poor sanitation, sewage
- Women were the “keepers of health”, expected to keep the home clean
- Epidemics widespread – typhoid, cholera, smallpox, measles, diphtheria, whooping cough
- Tuberculosis the primary cause of adult death
- Health care available only to those who could afford to pay
- Poor were treated in hospitals, the wealthy were treated at home
- People with disabilities were sequestered, hidden away
- People with mental illness were kept in asylums, often for a lifetime

(Friedland, 2011)
Societal Context 1890 to 1920

- Care for the poor or ill was organized and established by religious groups, rather than by the state
- “Social Gospel”
  - Promoted social justice
  - Established in cities
  - Dealt with urbanizing population, unemployed, indigent, immigrants
  - Done in the context of “charitable acts”
  - Some church-run settlement houses and city missions were established

- By 1900 there was a clear need for social reform and social justice
- In response, a number of movements emerged
  - Mental hygiene/Moral Movement
  - Arts and Crafts Movement
  - Educational Reform Movement
  - Settlement House Movement

(Friedland, 2011)
Parallel Movements

Mental Hygiene/Moral Movement

- Took place in asylums that housed people with mental illness
- Patients were treated with kindness and were protected
- Behaviour could be modified or controlled through engagement in activities
- Occupation could decrease the need for restraints
- Occupation gave order and meaning to patients’ lives
- Occupations could divert patients’ morbid thoughts
- Occupation was in the form of work for the institution itself, or was diversionary in the form of crafts

(Friedland, 2011)
Parallel Movements

Arts and Crafts Movement

- Arose in Britain as a socio-political response to the industrial age
- With industrialization people felt disconnected from nature, from work and from society
- Factory-produced goods were cheap, poorly designed; the work itself was dehumanizing
- John Ruskin and William Morris sought to reform society through art, promoted decorative arts, especially crafts, and extolled the use of one’s hands
- Craftsmanship was a way to help the unfortunate by providing them with skills
- Morris promoted the concept of a mutually-dependent and supportive community of craftspeople
- Creativity and “joyful work” were considered health-giving.

(Friedland, 2011)
Parallel Movements

Educational Reform

- Manual training was part of educational reform at the turn of the 19th century
- The movement was away from learning by rote to learning by doing, “active engagement”
- The term “occupation” was used to describe arts and crafts
- Manual training was used in schools to promote good work habits, independence and dexterity
- John Dewey advocated manual training to prepare children for daily life; knowledge through problem-solving
- Meaningful experiences help the individual connect with his/her environment

(Friedland, 2011)
Settlement House Movement – What was it?

- Physical space
- Situated in “poor” section of large cities
- Staffed by volunteers that ideally lived on site
- Promoted health and well-being of the entire community
- Programming focussed on immigrants, poor and disabled
- Education provided to “enable” individuals and families to be independent and therefore less dependent on social supports
- Common programs included language lessons, home management skills, health knowledge and arts & crafts.

(Friedland, 2011)
Settlement House Movement Development

- Late 1800s in UK (Octavia Hill)
- First settlement house in North America opened in 1886 in New York eventually increasing to 400 houses
- First Canadian house established in 1902 by Mary Bell and Sarah Carson in Toronto. Grew to 13 houses (six in Toronto)

(Friedland, 2011)
Settlement House Movement – OT Connection

- Elizabeth Casson (UK) – worked with individuals with mental illness and incorporated ideals of engaging them in activities and having staff and patients live together.
- Hull House in Chicago – strong emphasis on the value of arts and crafts.
- Future OTs provided craft lessons and practical life skills. Most famous – Eleanor Slagle

(Friedland, 2011)
Settlement House Movement - Principles

• Arouse social conscience
• Everyone has the right to be the “best selves” (James, 2001, p.6)
• Poor and disadvantaged had the right to be self-sufficient
• Independence was preferred over dependence on “the state”
• Well-being of the community
• People needed the opportunity to “re-connect” to their roots in the rural communities (connection to the land)

(Friedland, 2011)
Development of Occupational Justice

• Work with returning veterans from WW I and WW II
  ◦ Right for returning injured soldiers to contribute to society and be engaged in meaningful occupations
  ◦ Retraining activities
  ◦ Use of occupation to increase morale

• Loss of focus – fitting in with the medical model
  ◦ Desire for credibility began to outweigh client-centered practice
  ◦ Scientific knowledge outweighing the knowledge of the person
  ◦ Crafts and activity minimized and viewed as antiquated

• Return to our roots
May Hamilton, OT, circa 1944

Occupational Therapy Described At Quota Club

Occupational Therapy was described as "any activity, mental or physical, definitely prescribed for the purpose of contributing to hastening recovery from illness," in an address to the Winnipeg Quota club Tuesday in the Royal Alexander hotel, by Miss Dorothy Herron, B.A., University of Manitoba. Miss Herron took a two-year course in occupational therapy in Toronto, then six months in this country—three months in the State Hospital in Brooklyn, New York, then one month in a private sanatorium, and three months in France. She then returned to England where she was given a position in a hospital in Bristol and worked there. She later returned to Canada and began teaching occupational therapy at the University of Manitoba.

Miss Herron went to England where she was given a position in a hospital in Bristol and worked there. She later returned to Canada and began teaching occupational therapy at the University of Manitoba.

"Though a relatively new profession, occupational therapy is a cure as old as medicine," Miss Herron said. "Usually the doctor prescribes the exercise and the therapist the craft. Emphasis is laid on an activity that will keep the patient interested. Keeping busy keeps the mind off itself. In tuberculosis the trouble is part physical and part mental; since most patients are young, they worry about the expense and about their chance of working when they leave hospital. It is necessary to give them something to look forward to. They are given things to make that will sell. Simple physical activity and mental rest are the ideal combination."

In mental hospital, said the speaker, the patient was fished given the thing he liked most to do; later something more worth while might be substituted.

The president, Mrs. James Herford, occupied the chair and before introducing the speaker presented Mrs. R. F. McWilliams, honorary member, with a bouquet of red roses. Mrs. George A. Warren thanked the speaker.

Miss Ivy Withers, accompanied by Miss Elia M. Buchanan, sang, "Passing By, Who I Love, Wanting You, and Somewhere Over the Rainbow."
A Case History

- male, 28 years old
- born in Toronto, Canada
- to Egyptian and Palestinian immigrants who became Canadian citizens
- parents disliked some of the Western social influences
- grew up in Afghanistan during the war
- pushed into military combat at very young age by father
- severely wounded after being shot in the back twice
- convicted of war crimes by a United States military tribunal at the age of 15
- tortured for information during his imprisonment
- plea agreement signed after 10 years of detention without charge. He accepted an eight-year sentence, not including time served
- 2012 was repatriated to Canada and then released on bail in May 2015
- Plans to pursue an education in the health sciences
A Framework of Occupational Justice

Conditions of occupational justice leading to

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Structural Factors</th>
<th>Contextual Factors</th>
<th>Occupational Outcomes of Justice</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Underlying occupational determinants</td>
<td>Occupational instruments or programs</td>
<td>Occupational Rights</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>Examples:</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Conditions of occupational injustice leading to

(adapted from Townsend & Polatajko, 2013, p. 81)
Considerations for Contemporary Practice

1. What are examples of components and principles of occupational justice and the Settlement House movement
   ◦ that are reflected or you would like to see in your occupational therapy practice?
   ◦ that are reflected in occupational therapy practice in Canada?

2. What does the concept of occupational justice mean for occupational therapy practice in Canada?
   ◦ at the level of the individual practitioner?
   ◦ at the level of local or provincial occupational therapy communities/organizations?
   ◦ at the level of our national organization?

3. What recommendations do you have for CAOT about occupational justice and contemporary occupational therapy practice?
References

1. Google Images (freeware)
2. Used with permission of Microsoft